

BOOK SERIES ON 'SOUTHERN EUROPEAN SOCIETIES'

Series Editors: Dr Manuel Fernández-Esquinas, Institute for Advanced Social Studies, CSIC, Spain and Dr Laura Oso, Faculty of Sociology, University of La Coruña, Spain

CALL FOR BOOK PROPOSALS

DEADLINE: 15 SEPTEMBER 2018

The aim of the book series on Southern European Societies is to conduct research in social dynamics, social problems, institutions and governance in the South of Europe. The books are intended to be authoritative projects addressing topics related to social problems of common interest for several countries of southern Europe. Projects with a comparative element will be particularly welcome. The topics will be grounded mainly in sociological perspectives, open to interdisciplinary approaches and collaboration with related social sciences such as education, anthropology, social policy and others.

The Series welcomes submissions on topics such as: social welfare, work and employment, migrations, education, innovation, political participation, gender and youth, inequalities and social exclusion, EU integration and convergence, European identities, social relationships, institutions and policies, among other key topics.

The books are expected to be of between 80,000 and 100,000 words, including figures and references. Edited volumes are particularly welcome, but proposals for authored monographs will be also considered.

The book series is supported by the active collaboration of the ESA Research Network on "Southern European Societies" and RESU (the Network of Sociology Associations of Countries of the South of Europe).

SUBMISSIONS: If you have a suitable book project, please send a proposal to the Series Editors before 15 September 2018: Manuel Fernández-Esquinas, mfernandez@iesa.csic.es and Laura Oso, loso@udc.es
